

about

Well it truly begins at the beginning. My mum tells a true story of how I would climb out of my crib early in the morning and crawl down a flight of stairs with my bottle and then over to my special corner of the house where I could be found playing DJ, spinning and listening to music every morning, by the next early-riser in the household. I got my first drum at age six and began the musician's journey. No'a Winter Lazerus utilizes a wide range of skills in pursuit of his artistic vision and expression. Scoring is a passion for cinema, television, visual art, installation art, music recording projects and live event performances. His work has been tied to the films 300 and Watchmen, to films for PBS and he is Grammy nominated for his work in music recording and production.

No'a is known by his peers as a musical artist who can go any direction creatively with originality, innovation and a unique sonic approach. From Indie and Alt to Neo-Classical to Ambient and Spectral Sound Sculpting, he is recognized for dancing with many genres, instruments and styles.

No'a has and is currently working on creative projects with several known and diverse artists. He is also completing a new theatrical musical called "Ian Forest" with performer/writer Tony Moss. He is completing his Masters Thesis in Consciousness Studies which will include this new musical while he continues working on his own recording projects and new scoring projects all done in his home studio, "Voice of the Silence Sound". No'a is co-creator of the Art of Sound label marrying artists and artwork with composers and musicians, he has completed a new project called "Rad Files" for the Art of Sound label and explains it as - "An exploration into the distortions of beauty, the rhythms of chance and the answers just out of reach". Live No'a can be seen at unique events as one half of "The Housepainters" along with artist Louis Cannizzaro. Louis paints found objects while No'a creates with found sounds. No'a is now performing "Live Scoring" to chosen events with tremendous audience response. No'a is currently involved in new film scoring projects for the 2010. <http://www.myspace.com/httpwwwwhirledmusecomwinterlazerus>
